ALL COMMON STIRRED BY ATTEMPTED ASSAULT

Warrant Issued for Young Man, Who Is Believed to Have Come to Washington.

KING GEORGE COURT HOUSE, Va., February 12.—Residents of the vicinity of Corners, a village about four miles from here, have not recovered from the excitement incident to an attempted felonious assault, last Tuesday, upon Mrs. Newton, wife of Benjamin Newton, a farmer and clerk in the store of John T. Minor, county clerk.

A warrant has been issued for the arrest of Clarence Worrell, about twenty-two years old, who was in Mr. Newton's employ.

Joseph A. Billingsley, commonwealth's attorney, the sheriff and other county officers are active in a search for the man who is believed to be the assailant.

The authorities of other jurisdictions have been requested to participate in the search for the man who is believed to be the assailant.

One of the first messages sent from here was directed to Maj. Raymond W. Pullman, chief of police of Washington, where, it is stated, a brother of Worrell is employed.

It was presumed by the officers that young Worrell probably would go to Washington hoping to get assistance from his brother. The police of that city so far have failed to find him.

Tuesday morning Mr. Newton went to his place of employment at the store, leaving his wife and children at home, and about noon Mr. Farmer, a neighbor, called at the store and told him he was wanted at home immediately.

Learning from Mr. Farmer that Mrs. Newton had been assaulted, Mr. Newton hurried to the Farmer residence and found his wife in a terrible hysterical condition, not having recovered from her fright.

According to the story of the affair as related to the authorities and friends of the Newton family, Mrs. Newton was preparing lunch when she was attacked by the assailant.

When she was attacked, she screamed at the top of her voice, finally frightening off the assailant. She then fled to the house, where she was found by the Farmer residence, her children following.

Believe He Was on Steamer. The message from Commonwealth's Attorney Billingsley was not received at police headquarters in this city until several hours after the steamer Wakefield docked at its wharf, foot of 5th street, Wednesday morning.

It was learned by the police that a young man answering the description of Worrell, and who the police are certain was Worrell, reached here on the steamer that morning.

Detectives Warren and Evans were detailed to make a careful investigation of the case, and to find any trace of the young man after he left the steamer.

The description of Worrell was telephoned to the police station, and the information of every member of the force on active duty.

WEATHER. Rain, Probably Turning Into Snow; Somewhat Colder.

For the District of Columbia and Maryland, rain, probably turning into snow, today; somewhat colder. Tomorrow: fair; fresh northerly winds.

For Virginia, rain, possibly turning into snow in the interior today; much colder. Tomorrow: fair, colder on the coast; fresh shifting winds, becoming northerly.

For West Virginia, rain, turning into snow and much colder today. Tomorrow: fair.

Pressure continues abnormally high over the northern and western states, with the crest of highest pressure over the Dakotas, while slight barometric depressions are central over West Virginia and along the Mexican border.

Warm weather prevails throughout the southern Atlantic and Gulf states, and moderate temperatures prevail west of the Rocky mountains.

The pressure distribution over Alaska is such as to indicate that the prolonged period of cold weather over the northern states will give way to temperatures above the seasonal average within the next two to three days.

The pressure distribution over the English states, New York, the region of the great lakes, the upper Mississippi valley and the plains states, and rains in the middle Atlantic states, the Ohio valley, the lower Mississippi valley and the west Gulf states.

The indications are that there will be snow today in New England, New York and the Ohio valley, rain turning into snow in the middle Atlantic states, and rain in the east Gulf and south Atlantic states, except Florida. Tomorrow the weather will be generally fair east of the Mississippi river.

The temperature will be considerably lower today in the middle Atlantic states, the Ohio and lower Mississippi valleys and Tennessee, and tomorrow in the south Atlantic and east Gulf states.

The winds along the north Atlantic coast will be fresh easterly; on the middle Atlantic coast fresh shifting, becoming northerly; on the south Atlantic coast light to moderate variable; on the east Gulf coast moderate variable, becoming fresh northerly; on the west Gulf coast strong northerly; on the upper lakes fresh northerly; on the lower lakes fresh northeast and north.

HEARING ON NOMINATION OF GEN. ROBERT G. SMITH

Senate Committee Will Listen to Arguments For and Against Member of Excise Board.

A hearing on the nomination of Gen. Robert G. Smith as a member of the District excise board will be held by the subcommittee of the Senate District committee, to which the nomination has been referred, at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning. The call for the meeting has been sent out by Senator Phelan of California, chairman of the subcommittee.

While no formal charges have been filed so far against Gen. Smith, a number of persons have suggested they would like to be heard. Gen. Smith himself is expected to be present to answer any charges that may be made.

Strong opposition has developed to the reappointment of Gen. Smith to the excise board. Senator Sheppard of Texas, author of the prohibition bill for the District now pending before the Senate and chairman of the committee which investigated the administration of the excise law in the District at the last session of Congress, has declared himself against Gen. Smith's reappointment, as have Senators Jones of Washington and Senator Works of California. Senator Jones declared that in view of the report of the Senate committee criticizing the excise board, including Gen. Smith, chairman, the President was not justified in reappointing him.

The subcommittee to which the nomination has been referred consists of Senators Phelan, chairman, and Senators Martin, Salsbury, Jones and Works. This is the same subcommittee which recommended that the Sheppard prohibition bill be reported to the Senate.
